Historical Information

"Art publishing" is an umbrella term used for publications such as zines, art zines, comics, as well as small/micro-press publications, self-published works, and art publishing projects. These publications are often difficult to categorize, but usually are produced in limited quantities with a focus on artistic expression and personal narratives.

Zines are small, handmade publications, usually self-published with limited runs. The subjects covered by zines run the gamut of humanity's interests, as anyone can be a "zinester." Zines often include art, poetry, and the personal interests and experiences of the zinester, or author. Zines are "DIY" by nature, and are usually only available in limited quantities.

Zines - short for "fanzines" - became popular with underground science fiction fan circles in the 1930s and 1940s, and grew exponentially in underground and counterculture circles in the 1960s and 1970s. The invention of the copy machine in the 1970s expanded growth even more. Zines and zinesters have continued to thrive into the 21st century.

Scope and Content

This collection contains international art publications, such as zines, art zines, comics, and other micro-press or self-published publications. This collection was curated by Stephanie Grimm, Art and Art History Librarian at George Mason University Libraries, to provide a concentrated example of art publishing through a non-American lens.

Materials were created between 2009-2023. Topics and publishing locations vary - see inventory for more details.
