Biographical or Historical Information

The Office of Institutional Research and Assessment (previously Institutional Planning), "analytical arm" of Old Dominion University's central administration. As part of its function, the office assists in systematically planning the University's future, managing its resources, and assessing its performance. The office's role is to provide analytical and technical support to University executive management in regard to strategic planning and data-based decision making; coordinate statistical data to state, federal, and private agencies; produce the University factbook for the university community; as well as create and maintain statistical databases.

Note written by Kathleen Smith

Scope and Contents

The collection consists of long-range planning studies, surveys, reports, "quality of life" surveys, and strategic plans created by the Office of Institutional Research and Assessment at Old Dominion University.
