Biographical/Historical Information

New Virginia Review, Inc. is a non-profit, statewide literary organization dedicated to the cultivation and development of informed audiences for literature throughout the state, and to the creation of new opportunities for writers to present their works to the public. It has published six volumes of an annual journal containing prose and poetry by authors associated with Virginia and the South. It is supported by the Virginia Commission for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Arts, and public and private contributions

Scope and Contents

The collection consists of manuscripts submitted for the New Virginia Review, Volumes I and V; correspondence between contributors and editors; proofs representing various stages of the production process; and a number of taped readings and lectures. Included in the collection are a number of journals and books which have been marked and assimilated into the regular Special Collections small press and poetry collections.
