Administrative Information

Scope and Contents

The Education Collection is an artificial collection of artifacts and memorabilia maintained for use in exhibits, instruction, and other teaching purposes. Items in this collection may be reproductions or period artifacts, but lack documentation or significance, or duplicate objects already represented in the University Archives Artifact Collection (UA 13) and the Manuscripts Artifact Collection (Mss 1.03). Items in this collection are intentionally used in exhibits or instruction with the understanding that this will shorten the life of the objects.

Accruals:

Special Collections Research Center adds material to this collection on a regular basis.

Arrangement of Materials:

Artifacts are organized according to Nomenclature 3.0 for Museum Cataloging: Third Edition of Robert G. Chenhall's System for Classifying Man-Made Objects, which is published by AltaMira Press in cooperation with the American Association for State and Local History. Nomenclature 3.0 classifies artifacts based on their purpose or function.

Categories include: Built Environment Artifacts, Furnishings, Personal Artifacts, Tools and Equipment, Distribution and Transportation Artifacts, Communication Artifacts, Recreational Artifacts, and Unclassifiable Artifacts.

This collection is currently being evaluated, described, and rehoused by staff.

Description of Subordinate Components

Built Environment Artifacts

Unit ID id99586

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159817

Scope and Contents

Artifacts originally created to define space for human activities or to be used as components of space-defining artifacts.

Building Components

Unit ID id99587

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159825

Scope and Contents

Artifacts originally created as part of the building's fabric. Although building components are distinct objects, they function as parts of larger structures rather than as independent units. Building components can be separate distinct, and generally interchangeable structural, functional, or decorative parts of buildings such as beams, sinks, or architectural ornaments. This classification also includes samples integral to buildings, such as wall sections, staircases, or porches, as well as certain whole-structure building system components such as ventilators or furnaces. Excluded from this classification are parts of buildings that are not integral parts of the structure, such as furnishings or lighting devices, which are included in the Furnishings category.

Window Pane

Unit ID id152055

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159860

Scope and Contents

Clear glass window pane with words etched into the glass. The pane measures 8" (width) x 10" (height). Fair condition. The glass has a piece missing on one edge, filled with grime along the edges, and glass is scratched with writing. Accompanying typed note on box states, "Property of Mr. J.D. Carneal, Richmond, Va. Deposited by Mr. Carl Voyles." EDU2012.032

Stone and Metal Bar

Unit ID id186313

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159861

Scope and Contents

Stone possibly linked to the house of Captain James Smith. The large stone, which could have building a part of a house, has a metal bar wrapped around it. The note that accompanied the stone was too damaged to read. Stone and bar in in fair condition with some wear and rust. EDU2012.078

Site Features

Unit ID id99588

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159826

Scope and Contents

Artifacts originally created as distinct elements associated with sites, buildings, or parts of larger structures. Rather than functioning simply as parts of larger structures, site features are independent entities that complement other structures. This classification includes such artifacts as birdbaths, flagpoles, gates, and fences.

Furnishings

Unit ID id99590

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159818

Bedding

Glass Ashtrays

Unit ID id186047

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159862

Scope and Contents

2-Glass leaded ashtrays. The identical ashtrays are in the shape of a seashell. Ashtrays measure 5" (diameter). One ashtray is in good condition with few scratches to the surface of the glass but needs to be cleaned. The other ashtray is in fair condition. It has similar flaws but also displays a crack and a chip to the glass in the corner of the object (the crack has not penetrated through the glass).

English bone china porcelain teacup and saucer. Both items have green (made from copper) and a gilded gold leaf/running stylized floral pattern with a white base. Bone china, invented in the early 19th century, uses calcium from crushed bone in order to reinforce the structure and maintain the item's integrity. Saucer measures 5 3/4" (diameter). Cup measures 3 1/2" (width) including handle x 3" (height) including handle. Saucer is in fair condition with markings on both sides and cracks that have not penetrated the item. The green from copper and gilded gold is in tact. Cup is in fair condition with crack near the handle that has not penetrated the item, but the gilded gold is fading on the cup's brim, inside base, and around the outside. Green from copper is still in tact. EDU2012.049A-B

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159893

Unit Date 1803-1815

Mixed materials EDU2012.65 (Artifact)

Scope and Contents

3-Lead shot pellets from the Shot Tower in Chester, England. The Chester Shot Tower, also known as the Boughton Shot Tower, was erected next to the leadworks established by Walkers, Maltby, and Company in 1800 in order to produce lead shot for the Napoleonic Wars. The brick tower is circular measuring 9m (diameter) at the base and 6m (diameter) at the crown. The building is 51m tall. Molten lead, to which arsenic was added, was poured from the top of the tower passing through a griddle to separate into pellets. It then would land in a vat of water at the bottom of the tower. No measurements (sealed with wax in glass container). Pellets are in good condition with no visible defects but there are some much smaller pieces in the container as well (possibly remnants from another pellet). EDU2012.065

Amputation Saw

Unit ID id286227

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159898

Unit Date circa 1860s

Mixed materials EDU2015.06 (Artifact)

Scope and Contents

Steel amputation saw with metal and ebony handle. Short, wide bladed saw with integrated handle fashioned to fit hand having both a finger hole and a tang to supply support for base of thumb and forefinger. Used to quickly saw through bone while removing injured body parts - primarily arms and legs. After a tourniquet is applied above the injury site, a long, sharp knife is used to quickly cut through the skin and muscle around the circumference of the limb completely down to bone in (if possible) in one circular pass. After the bone is exposed, the saw is used to quickly remove the limb. The exposed muscle is cauterized with a hot iron and the edges of the bone end are rounded with a file. The large arteries and veins are tied off with silk suture material and the skin sewed together to cover the end of the stump. A skilled surgeon could complete the procedure in minutes. The patient generally was given copious amounts of liquor or laudanum (opium) prior to the surgery, but still it was necessary to have several strong men at hand to keep the patient on the operating table. Dimensions: Overall: 14.25 in.(length) x 3.0 in. (height) x 0.75 in. (thickness of handle). Toothed part of blade is 10.5 in. (length) x 0.03125 in. (thickness) and from 2.0 to 2.75 in. wide. Finger hole is 0.875 in. (diameter). Condition: Good to excellent condition with mild corrosion on blade surface and metallic frame. Dried blood is present in the checkering on the handle as well as in the corner formed by the junction of the blade and the surrounding metal frame. The teeth of the blade show moderate wear and there is evidence of wear adjacent to the teeth along the length of the blade where it contacted bone being sawn through. SCRC Purchase. EDU2015.006

Chesapecten Jeffersonius Fossil Scallop

Unit ID id254012

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/159859

Scope and Contents

Chesapecten Jeffersonius fossil scallop measuring 6 in. (length) x 5.5 in. (height). Outer anterior edge has some loss of shell material and there is a 1.625 in. crack extending up from the umbo/hinge. Gift of Gerald H. Johnson, Professor Emeritus of Geology. EDU2014.009 Background information provided by Professor Johnson: "The Jefferson scallop was first described by Martin Lister in 1687. Thomas Say officially named it Pecten jeffersonius in 1824. Ward and Blackwelder erected a new genus of fossil scallops, Chesapecten, in 1975 and assigned the Jefferson scallop to it. Later the Virginia State Legislature adopted Chesapecten jeffersonius as the state fossil of Virginia upon the urging of staff at the Virginia Natural History Museum and members of the College of William and Mary community. "The state fossil is found in the lower part of the Yorktown Formation, a shelly sand with a diverse fossil fauna. The Yorktown crops out along rivers in eastern Virginia. Chesapecten jeffersonius lived on a shallow, wave-swept sea floor during the early Pliocene Epoch, about 4 million years ago. Most shells are preserved in their original state, and are composed of the mineral calcite. Many scallops have fossil borings made by snails, worms, clams, 'moss animals' and algae, and also may have barnacles, corals and other organisms attached to their shells."
