Acc. 2010.311 accessioned and minimally described by Steven Bookman, University Archives Specialist, in 5/2010. All accessions were integrated and processed by David Ward, SCRC Graduate Apprentice, from October 2013-January 2014. Acc. 2015.148 accessioned and minimally described by Steven Bookman, University Archives Specialist, in June 2015.

Preferred Citation:

Williamsburg Documentary Project Collection, Special Collections Research Center, Swem Library, College of William and Mary.

Historical Note:

The American Studies Program offers students the opportunity to engage with the complex and diverse histories of cultural, racial, and national encounters that, like those of our local area, have come to shape the past and present of the United States, and the Americas. In a rigorous, yet flexible environment of intellectual inquiry, students develop the critical skills that allow them not only to pursue rewarding careers, but to serve as responsible citizens of the 21st Century.

Scope and Contents

This collection is composed of material collected and created by the Williamsburg Documentary Project. The Williamsburg Documentary Project conducts oral history interviews and builds physical and digital archives, as well as other activities, through which it interprets the past of Williamsburg, Virginia.

The collection includes publications, news clippings, interviews, and planning documents about Merchant's Square, New Town, food, immigration, as well as events related to Williamsburg history. Events documented in this collection include the removal of a cross from the chapel in the William & Mary Wren Building at the direction of College President Gene R. Nichol.

Related Materials:

Digital content documents from the Williamsburg Documentary Project, including some interviews, are available at William & Mary Libraries Digital Collections <https://digital.libraries.wm.edu/williamsburg-documentary-project>.

Description of Subordinate Components

Series 1: Oral History Interviews

Unit ID id72229

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/438065

Unit Date circa 1995-2012

Scope and Contents

VERY IMPORTANT: Anyone quoting from or making substantial use of the oral histories collected here should consider THE SOUND RECORDINGS THE DEFINITIVE SOURCE. Transcripts, indexes, and key words are only tools meant to help guide users to the sound recordings. Most of these interviews were done by WDP student-interviewers. Most interviews combine a life history format with some questioning specific to a student-interviewer's research interests. As part of their training, WDP students do some group interviews and also interview one another, and the collection also contains these recordings. Additionally, the collection gathers some recordings that were done by other groups—for example, local volunteers helping commemorate Williamsburg's 300th anniversary. All oral history interviews conducted by the WDP are done following the Oral History Association's principles and best practices guidelines. Each record in the digital archive contains: a) a sound recording of an interview (WAV format; some MP3 format); a few recordings have been edited to reflect restrictions; some recordings are available for use only on-site in Swem Library's Special Collections b) an image of the Deed of Gift relevant to the interview (PDF or TIFF format) c) a "live index" to the recording (PDF format); these indexes were made by assistants to the main interviewer during the interview and, using time code, give a rough guide to major topics covered in the interview. d) a "headnote" (PDF format); written by the main interviewer, headnotes give some basic information on the circumstances in which the interview took place and highlight some key topics covered in the interview. Many records also contain: e) an interview transcript, which incorporates the headnote described above (PDF format); prepared by the main interviewer, transcripts attempt to render the dialogue of the interview in a way that is quickly searchable. SCHOLARS WISHING TO QUOTE, SYNOPSIS, OR REFERENCE A WDP ORAL HISTORY SHOULD ALWAYS CHECK THE TRANSCRIPT AGAINST THE INTERVIEW RECORDING. Some records may also contain: f) scans of documents or photographs (TIFF files) related to the interviewee or topics covered in the interview.

Interviews

Final papers for student projects consist of a variety of subjects on the community life and culture within Williamsburg and surrounding environs. Some of these topics have related oral history and digital materials in the William & Mary digital archive. This series contains student project map diaries from 2008-2012. Students track their locations and movements for a 24 hour period to construct a map diary of their day. There is no prescribed format for the map diary. The bulk of the series is arranged by project title.

Please note that select student papers are restricted from viewing due to privacy. Please consult with a staff member for assistance.

Bell, Barbara Guest Interview

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593087

Unit Date 2018

Scope and Contents

This interview was conducted by Andrew Cotman and was indexed by Marriya Schwarz with audio management by Nicholas DeAtley. The interview was later transcribed by Nicholas DeAtley, Marriya Schwarz, and Andrew Cotman. The interview took place during the afternoon of 3/15/18 in the third floor 311 classroom of the College of William and Mary American Studies building, located on 114 North Boundary Street Apt Williamsburg, VA 23185, using a Zoom H-1 Handy Voice Recorder. Overall the quality of the interview is very clear, however the volume of the interview was a little low. There was a little interference due to an AC unit turning on and off which may have obstructed slightly the clearness and volume of Ms. Bell's voice. Also, there was an interference early on in the interview because Ms. Bell's microphone detached from her jacket. During the interview, Barbara Bell discussed her experiences in various school systems, like Richmond Public Schools, Fairfax County Public Schools, Department of Defense Schools, and the Medina City School District, during her 35 years of teaching. She reflected on her experiences teaching students with varying socioeconomic statuses. Throughout the interview, she made references to the power of having diversity throughout the classroom, and the joy that she has gained from teaching. Towards the end of the interview, she discussed her work with homeless student populations and a program that she created, called Diversity-In-Actions that promotes knowledge of African-American culture. For clarity, the transcribers have eliminated ever "um" and "uh" from the transcription.

The content of this note was taken from the headnote created by the interview team.

Byrd-Poller, Lynda Guest Interview

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593088

Unit Date 2018 February 20

Scope and Contents

We interviewed Dr. Byrd-Poller on Tuesday, February 20th, 2018 in the upstairs classroom in the college apartments. Besides two brief distractions (one from a man hoping to print some papers and the other when we needed to get Dr. Byrd-Poller some water), the interview continued uninterrupted. We began by discussing her own experience growing up in the Williamsburg- James City County school system and her children's experiences and how practices have changed over time. We then began discussion of her twisting career path that eventually led her to her current position as Director of Human Resources at Thomas Nelson Community College. One topic that was particularly relevant throughout the interview was the issue of diversity in her own schooling experience, her children's, and today as she plays a large role in hiring prospective staff.

Scope and Contents

This interview was conducted by Shainir Bearfield and was indexed by Nicholas DeAtley with audio management done as well by Nicholas DeAtley. Nicholas DeAtley and Shainir Bearfield later transcribed the interview together. The interview took place at 3:30 p.m. of March 23rd of 2018, at the Land Tech Resources Inc. building located on 3925 Midlands road located in Williamsburg, Virginia 23188 using a Zoom H-1 Handy Voice Recorder. Overall the quality of the interview is very clear and all audio equipment worked extremely well. Interviewed was Lisa Ownby who serves as the Vice Chair of the Williamsburg James City County School board. She is also appointed as head of the special education advisory committee within the school board system. During the interview Lisa Ownby discusses how her relationship with her brother unfortunately suffering from numerous disabilities impacted her life choices and career path. Throughout the interview she discusses her early volunteering with Special Olympics eventually leading to her eventual work at Child Development Resources funded by the U.S. Department of Education. Lisa Ownby in this interview offers her point of view on several facets of the Williamsburg James City County Public school system. First and foremost she offers her perspective on funding of special education on a local, state and national level. This interview was an excellent way to see how those working within the school board view the production of the special education system and of what issues are taking place in the system in regards to funding. Throughout this interview for clarity, the transcribers have eliminated "um" and "uh" from the transcription.

Albarracin, Jennifer Interview

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593090

Unit Date 2018

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Jennifer Albarracin at the William and Mary Barnes and Noble on Saturday, April 7. We were originally meeting to interview Elias Martinez, a father of English Language Learning students in WJCC schools. However, by some miscommunication, even though he arrived at the bookstore, we were never able to find each other. I'm guessing it was an issue with parking. After waiting an hour, I interviewed Jennifer. We discussed her own experience growing up in Fairfax, Virginia with the label of "ESL" and how it drove her towards academic success because she wanted to leave behind the term "ESL" as an identifier. We also touched on her parents' interactions with the school system and how her relationship with her parents was strained by communication barriers. Today, Jennifer is a William and Mary student, minoring in Latin American studies in order to learn more about her own roots. The background noise is relatively loud throughout the interview, but the recording is still understandable. Although she does state her name as Jennifer Albarracin Moya in the recording, most of the time she goes by solely her first last name, Albarracin, and so I decided to refer to her as Jennifer Albarracin after consulting her preferences.

Barko-Alva, Katherine Interview

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593092

Unit Date 2018 April 18

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Dr. Barko-Alva on Wednesday, March 21 in Swem library in a group study lounge on the first floor (this gives reference for the occasional muffled voices in the background). Earlier in the day weren't sure if the interview was going to happen because it was snowy, but we did end up completing the interview. We discussed Dr. Barko-Alava's educational background, beginning with her high school experience in Peru to finishing high school in the U.S. and going on to succeed at the University of Florida. She began teaching English her junior year of college and once she graduated, she worked in the local public-school system. Dr. Barko-Alva went back to UF to earn her Master's and Ph.D, and finally found herself at William and Mary. We also discussed her involvement in educational activist work in Virginia and her experiences 'in the Williamsburg-James City County school system. There were a few sections of the narrative that were removed at the request of the narrator for various reasons including a confidential conversation Dr. Barko-Alva is not at liberty to reveal. However, none of the deleted sections were crucial to the narrative being recounted. The content of this note comes from the headnote created by the interview team.

Carver, Laura Interview edited

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593094

Unit Date 2018 April 16

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Ms. Laura Carver on Tuesday, March 20 at her office in Hornsby Middle School. Unfortunately, a small portion of the oral history was lost because the voice recorder's memory card filled up, and I did not notice it until after she was done responding to my question. However, the unrecorded section could not have been much longer than two or three minutes. Ms. Carver is an English as a Second Language teacher in the WJCC school system and has been since 2015, so we began the interview with a brief overview of her day-to-day interactions with English Language Learners and their parents. We also discussed her educational background and her experience working as a missionary and how both impact her interpretation of her role as an ESL teacher. We ended the interview discussing the challenges of ESL education, specifically in the local area, faced by the ELL students, their teachers, their families and guardians, and WJCC school system .and a few possible ways to better address those challenges in the future. There were three separate sections that were removed at the request of the Ms. Carver and they are noted in the transcript. Nothing crucial to the slory line of her narrative was lost by these deletions.

Tilghman, Dr. Patricia M. Interview

Unit Date 2018

Scope and Contents

I sent these questions sent to Dr. Patricia Tilghman by email, which explains the odd formatting of this document. Her responses follow each bolded question. Dr. Tilghman gave me an overview of the ESL program in WJCC schools as well as information about her own background in ESL education. She also discussed a few of the largest challenges WJCC schools face in engaging parents of ESL students. Informed consent was received through email. I have printed that out, along with a Deed of Gift.

Brandis, Alexis Brendes A Interview

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593104

Unit Date 2018 April 18

Scope and Contents

This interview was conducted and later indexed by Marriya Schwarz. The interview took place during the evening of 4.4.18 at the College of William & Mary's Swem Library in Group Study Room 235, using a Zoom H-1 Handy Voice Recorder. Overall, the quality of the interview is fairly clear. There is some interference due to people talking and playing music loudly over in the next room. During the interview, Alexis Brender A. Brandis discussed her experiences as an athlete. She has been involved with Track & Field, gymnastics, and Tae Kwon Do. She went on to discuss some of her experiences as a current member of the College of William & Mary's Track & Field team. She reflected on her experiences with various Williamsburg-James City County Schools and discussed different experiences with teachers. Towards the end of the interview, she discussed her relationship with her family, namely her unofficial "adoptive brother," Ramon, her experiences so far as a sophomore at the College of William & Mary, and her experiences with having a connection to both the Williamsburg community and the College.

This interview was conducted by Marriya Schwarz and indexed by Brenna Cowardin. The interview was later transcribed by Marriya Schwarz. The interview took place during the evening of 4/12/18 in front of theater at the Williamsburg Regional Library on Scotland Street, using a Zoom H-1 Handy Voice Recorder. Overall, the quality of the interview is fairly clear, but the volume is somewhat low. There is some interference due to people filing in and out of the Williamsburg Library, but the audio still can be heard. During the interview, Sylvia Shearin Willis discussed her experiences with education within Williamsburg-James City County Schools, primarily her experiences with Bruton Heights School and later James Blair High School after integration in 1966. She reflected on the differences between the two schools. She also discussed her experiences with the different teaching at both schools and minority teaching. Towards the end of the interview, she also discussed her experiences with historically black colleges, as well as the educational experiences of her two daughters. For clarity and as requested by the narrator, the transcriber has eliminated every "um," "uh," and "like" from the transcription.

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Shamir Bearfield at Swem Library, located rather centrally on the William and Mary campus, in group study room 118. This room is located on the quieter side of the first floor of Swem, and we were therefore able to converse without interruption throughout the interview. The interview focused on Shamir's educational experiences growing up, particularly his movement from public to private school and the influence of football on his academic career. We also discussed his transition from a public middle school to a private high school and how that better prepared him for college at William and Mary.

Cowardin, Brenna Peer Interview

Scope and Contents

The interview with Brenna Cowardin was recorded on a Tuesday afternoon in a group study room in Earl Greg Swem Library on the William & Mary Campus. Other than our voices, the room was quiet because the door was closed. The room was lined with windows in Brenna's line of sight, which showed students walking around study tables and talking. The only other person in the room was the indexer, Shamir Bearfield. Brenna has a passion education, especially for students who are learning English as a Second Language (ESL). Brenna talks about her interest in education as she reflects on her own experience in the Harrisonburg city public schools in Virginia. Although she has no current plans for entering the educational field, she hopes to use her acquisition of the Spanish language to bridge the gaps for these students and their families in the American public education system.

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Ms. Marriya Schwarz in the third floor 311 classroom of the William and Mary American Studies academic building, located on 114 North Boundary St. Williamsburg, VA 23185. This was my first time interviewing with the Zoom H-1 Handy Voice Recorder. Overall the quality of the interview is very clear, however the volume of the interview was a little low. This was Marriya's first time being interviewed so she was a little nervous despite some nerves, overall the interview went very well and was very natural. Marriya discusses in the interview where she is from and her upbringing. Detailed are her experiences growing up in Herndon, Virginia with her sister as well as her transition to high school where she excelled in many extracurricular activities. As a high school senior she also detailed many of her experiences transitioning from high school to college and the nerve wrecking college decision process that many seniors go through so often. Throughout my transcript I have decided to remove the majority of non-verbal utterances such as "uh" and "um" because it does not represent by my opinion an important aspect of Marriya's speaking style. I also felt it hindered the fluidity of the transcript as it occurred throughout the interview quite often. Marriya is a very academically focused person, who has garnered some very highly regarded awards from her scholastic work. Her ultimate goal is to become a screenwriter and intends to follow that passion after she graduates from the College of William and Mary.

Unit Date 2017 April 13

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Mr. Robert Braxton in the College Apartments, which is located on Boundary Street in Williamsburg, VA, in the office of the Williamsburg Documentary Project. Mr. Braxton was very engaged with the topic and welcoming of any questions that we had for him. He began his interview by drawing out a revised version of a map of the Triangle, which we drew a copy of. Having grown up in the area surrounding the Triangle, Mr. Braxton had a valuable perspective on the area. We covered topics regarding the businesses that were located on the Triangle, how the redevelopment project occurred, and the progress that Williamsburg is making today, in addition to Mr. Braxton's experience on City Council.

I interviewed Steve Harris in College Apartments 5a, overlooking the businesses and traffic at the corner of Prince George Street and South Boundary Street. It was a nice day out and we were lucky that Mr. Harris, who was visiting from Michigan where he now spends much of his time, had lent of his limited time in Williamsburg to the WDP's research of the Triangle Block. The conversation spanned the pre-redevelopment, redevelopment, and post-redevelopment periods of the Triangle's history, starting from Mr. Harris's days at Marshall-Wythe Law School. Mr. Harris brought with him a series of printed-out aerial photographs of the Triangle which he refers to multiple times during the interview.

Samantha and I interviewed Mr. Parker in one of the conference rooms on the first floor of College Apartments. He brought along a large binder full of documents that he allowed us to make copies of later, so there are times throughout the recording and transcript that he pauses to look at his materials or pull out a piece for our use. We discovered him through his association with the Society of Friends of African American History, the group responsible for the monument at the Triangle, so a lot of our focus was on that. He also shared his personal feelings about redevelopment and other issues surrounding the history of African Americans in Williamsburg. Early in the interview, there is some confusion over where Mr. Parker was to sign on the informed consent form, so there are pauses as we examined the form.

I, Kandace Kimber, and Francie Zidonis interviewed Tony Conyers in Adriene's office in the College Apartments. Unfortunately, the room wasn't sound proof and there were renovations being done in the hallway so there is some background noise that can be heard in recording. Conyers is a native to Williamsburg and has spent majority of his career in both local and federal government. During the interview we discuss his upbringing and adulthood in Williamsburg, his experience developing new initiatives for the citizens in the city, and what he envisions for Williamsburg and James City County in the future.

Scope and Contents

I interviewed former City Councilman Scott Foster in one of the offices on the second floor of the college apartments. It was a very comfortable and casual atmosphere and I believe Mr. Foster had no trouble expressing himself in that environment. Scott Foster was a former student at the College of William & Mary ('10) and the first student to be elected to the Williamsburg City Council serving from 2010-2018. He has now retired from the City Council and resides in Skipwith Farms with his wife, working at a local law firm. We spoke a lot about Foster's time at the college (as well as, the law school), affordability in Williamsburg, and his overall passion for the city.

Scope and Contents

We interviewed Roy Gerardi and Tyrone Franklin in a small office in the Municipal Building, located at 401 Lafayette Street, on Friday, April 12. Mr. Gerardi could not stay for the duration of the interview, but before he was called out, he discussed his role in the Williamsburg Redevelopment and Housing Authority (WRHA), some of the programs available for low-income residents, and what he terms the "five-fold reality" of poverty. During his half of the interview, Mr. Franklin, the newly hired executive director for the WRHA, spoke about his experiences with affordable housing in his previous roles and his plans for Williamsburg moving forward.

Johnson, Al and Liz Interview

Unit Date 2019 April 2

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Albert and Liz Johnson in the living room of their home in the BrookHaven neighborhood, which is located off of Ironbound road in James City County. While both Al and Liz participated in the interview, only Al wore a microphone so many of Liz's contributions are quiet or difficult to hear. I have done my best to transcribe them accurately, but some of her comments were indistinguishable due to the distance. The Johnsons seemed happy to welcome us into their home and to speak with us about Brookhaven. They have participated in the Williamsburg Documentary Project in the past and are experienced interviewees among American Studies students. During the interview the Johnsons showed us plans for the neighborhood, documents from Al's restaurant career, and photographs of their restaurant. We discussed the history and milieu of Brookhaven and Al's role as a founder of the neighborhood and a local entrepreneur.

Scope and Contents

I interviewed Mr. Small in a conference room in the Public Works and Utilities department of the Williamsburg Municipal Building, located off of Lafayette Street in Williamsburg, Virginia. Mr. Small is a Williamsburg native and the current city engineer. His father worked in city planning in Williamsburg and James City County as well, helping to develop neighborhoods like Newtown and Fords Colony. As someone who has lived here for almost his entire life, Mr. Small has developed an extensive interest in the history of the development of Williamsburg. Our interview covers a number of topics, including why Williamsburg and the surrounding areas began to expand and develop in the eighties and nineties, moving into the history of various neighborhoods and areas, and finishing with a better understanding about how various aspects of the environment affect the way the city is developed. Throughout the course of the interview, there are various references to Google Maps, which Mr. Small was showing us on a projector, and to a smaller map in the room of Williamsburg with the understanding that it looks like a turkey.

The room was noticeably brighter than many of the surrounding rooms and areas and did somewhat disturb the individuals in the room. Kandace is a senior at the College and a Virginia native coming from Petersburg, VA. We spoke a lot about her living situation and went into great detail about her plans for the future. Kandace had a very relaxed demeanor and if she was nervous for the interview, one could not tell. A variety of topics were touched on during the interview concerning Kandace's personal life goals, about which she seemed very keen to talk about.

I interviewed Ms. Resha in her office in the College Apartments, located on South Boundary Street in Williamsburg, VA. This is a practice interview for class, my second time every interviewing someone and my first time leading an interview on my own. Ms. Resha is 24 years old and a graduate student in the American Studies department, and the Teaching Assistant for our class. She studies Arab and Muslim representation in comic books. We discussed her research to some extent, but also focused a lot on her sense of what home has meant to her at varying points in her life. Ms. Resha considers herself to be "from" Florida, but has also lived in a number of places like Alabama, Charlottesville, VA, and Williamsburg.

Zidonis, Francie InterviewUnit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/593208Unit Date 2019 February 24Scope and Contents

I interviewed Francie Zidonis in College Apartments (114 N Boundary Street) room 224 the evening of Sunday, February 24th, 2019. By the time we had finished this interview, it was dark outside. The narrator, indexer, and myself had each already participated in two other practice interviews prior to conducting this interview. There is no remarkable outside noise; however, there are occasionally moments when laughter overwhelms the interview. We discussed Francie's hometown, Columbus, Ohio, and Williamsburg, often the College of William & Mary specifically, among other things.

Scope and Contents

In this roundtable interview, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation employees Adam Canaday, Janice Canaday, and Paul Undra Jeter join the Director of Engagement at the Muscarelle Museum and visual artist Steve Prince and discuss the memorialization of African American history in Williamsburg, representation in the arts, local and national resistance to historical truth-telling, and visions for honoring African American ancestors. The Canadays discuss how being descendants of the first Black families of Williamsburg shaped both their careers as interpreters of African American history in CW. They also detail the legacy of Black labor in Williamsburg and express their frustrations with current obstacles to include African American representations in museums. Mr. Prince discusses his role as a visual artist, how he incorporates tragic histories within beautiful images, the power of visual representation, and how the lack of African American representation in public spaces harms the community. The narrators ask each other questions and relate their experiences throughout their discussion since this was the first time the CW employees met Steve Prince and the interviewers. The interview was conducted by undergraduate student Katherine 'Kate' Zabinski and indexed by her classmate Jamie Carkenord on April 20, 2022, at the Colonial Williamsburg Interpreters Office located at 427 Franklin Street in Williamsburg, VA. Unit Date 2022 April 29

Scope and Contents

In this interview, former Williamsburg resident Jessika Weaver Miller (daughter of Williamsburg activist Johnette Gordon Weaver and granddaughter of Highland Park resident Myrtle Gordon) describes her professional experiences in the U.S. Navy and in insurance work and education in Australia. She speaks about joining the Navy after attending the U.S. Naval Academy and starting a family with her Australian husband in Australia. There, she developed an interest in local Indigenous cultures and decided to pursue teaching professionally. Miller describes her decision to teach in the Torres Strait, a remote northern island region populated by Indigenous communities. She talks about the challenges of cross-cultural teaching and working in a remote school with limited technological resources and low literacy rates, and her effort to start a Navy Cadet program in the area. She then shifts to discuss her own educational experience in Williamsburg, Virginia, particularly at Jamestown High School, a majority-white school. She speaks to her involvement with the First Baptist Church in Williamsburg and her relationship with churches in Australia. The interview concludes with a discussion of her two elementary school-aged children and her educational and social goals for them. This interview was conducted by undergraduate W&M senior Jamie Carkenord on April 29, 2022 using the Zoom video conferencing platform. Jessika Miller was Zooming in from Thursday Island, Australia, so her local time was 9:00am on April 30th. This interview was completed as part of Carkenord's research project in AMST 410: Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Professor Michelle Lelièvre.

Saniga, Martin Interview

Unit ID cuid454

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/592789

Unit Date 2022 February 24

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Martin Saniga, who identifies as Saponi, Native, and American, discusses how growing up in Newport News, Virginia with his white mother and adoptive white father initially made him feel removed from his Saponi culture. He gradually reclaimed his culture by involving himself and making a difference within the Indigenous community of the greater Williamsburg area. On top of his career, he works with an Indigenous youth culture camp and is the president of a nonprofit language revitalization consortium. Mr. Saniga describes his career path: first joining the Coast Guard, later working as a site supervisor for Jamestown Settlement, and now working as an interpreter and head of the American Indian Initiative for Colonial Williamsburg. Mr. Saniga answers questions about the public reception of recent American Indian programming, museum ownership of Indigenous objects, the migration history of the Saponi people, William & Mary's complicated relationship with the local Indigenous community, and the effect of the COVID-19 pandemic on his work. The interview was conducted by undergraduate students Alex Luck and Alison Walsh on February 24th, 2022 using the Zoom video conferencing platform. The interview was indexed by undergraduate students Kirsten Knisely and Karissa McDonald. The interview was completed for the Guest Interview assignment in AMST 410: Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Professor Michelle Lelièvre.

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/592790

Unit Date 2022 January 30

Scope and Contents

Within this interview on January 30th, 2022 at 10:15am, Kirsten Knisely interviews her peer Alison Walsh. After Alison approves consent to conduct the interview, Kirsten begins her questions. Throughout the interview, Kirsten asks Alison questions concerning her youth and growing up, particularly what she was interested in as a kid and throughout high school. Alison describes her passions for sports and extracurriculars. She also describes her family and their importance to her. Kirsten continues to ask Alison about her time at William and Mary, what she is involved in, and who she spends her time with. Alison talks about her participation in a multitude of extracurricular activities and talks about her closest friends in college. The interview then moves to discussing the future, where Alison describes her plans to be an environmental lawyer and potentially starting a family one day. At the end of the interview, Alison signs the deed of gift form.

Weaver, Johnette Interview

Unit ID cuid456

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/592791

Unit Date 2022 February 15

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Ms. Johnette Weaver discusses how her personal history and education in Williamsburg, VA shaped her work as an advocate for social justice. She describes her family's arrival in Virginia in the late 17th century, their dislocations, and eventual establishment in Highland Park. Ms. Weaver explains her complicated relationship with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation alongside her pride in the work she has done as an interpreter there. She tells of her lifelong love of reading and of her choice to attend the historically Black college, Hampton University. Ms. Weaver discusses her social media manager position with Williamsburg Action, a social justice advocacy group that formed in 2020. The interview was conducted by undergraduate students Katherine Zabinski and Teresa Clark on February 15, 2022, using the Zoom video conferencing platform. In the interview, Clark and Zabinski reference the background knowledge they received about Johnette Weaver from assignments conducted in their undergraduate course AMST 410: Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Professor Michelle Lelièvre. Both the class assignment observations and interview were completed for an assignment in AMST 410.

Zabinski, Katherine Peer Interview

Unit ID cuid457

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/592792

Unit Date 2022 January 28

Scope and Contents

In this interview, William and Mary student Katherine Zabinski describes her upbringing in a military family, how it exposed her to other cultures and helped inform her passion for American history, and also describes her path to the college and the love of hip hop DJing she picked up here. Zabinski narrates her family's moves from California to Washington State to Virginia, where she has lived since middle school. She explains that she does not consider uprooting multiple times a downside, except that she finds it awkward trying to describe where she is from. On the contrary, she describes how living in multiple places exposed her to more diverse American cultures, growing familiar with Native and Chicano communities in California, Indigenous and Asian-American communities in Washington, and Black communities along with other diverse cultures in Virginia. She describes moving to Virginia and the South as a culture shock, but enjoyed the diverse geographies along with the diverse cultures: the California deserts, Washington mountains, and Virginia cotton and cornfields. Zabinski describes the roots of her interest in history and the way attending predominantly Black middle and high schools and becoming friends with Black women inspired her to learn more about African-American history and American history that acknowledges white supremacy. She narrates how she came to be interested in William & Mary. Initially having thought to join the military or attend cosmetology school, it was her teachers who encouraged her to take summer classes in the NIAHD program at the college, causing her to fall in love with the campus and with colonial to revolutionary American history—with Richmond as one focus. Zabinski closes the interview by describing the extracurricular she has most enjoyed at William and Mary: the SOUL students of hip hop legacy club. She describes her involvement in the executive and social media branches of the club, and the DJing she had the opportunity to on a large and small scale during her time here.

Meyer, Leisa Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/613624

Unit Date 2024 April 23

Scope and Contents

In this interview, American Studies and Gender, Sexuality and Women's Studies (GSWS) Professor Leisa Meyer narrates their experience living in Williamsburg, Virginia, and the surrounding areas as it pertains to the Queer community. Professor Meyer begins with detailing their life as a Professor at William and Mary, how much they care for their students and reform, and how they came to be a Professor and long-time resident of Williamsburg. They explain how the surrounding areas of Williamsburg have a more lively Queer presence, and details some of the history behind the notorious Gay/Lesbian bars in these more urbanized towns. Throughout the interview, there are discussions of what qualifies as a Queer space, what Williamsburg and the Queer community in the town can do to advance their presence in the Colonial city, and ends with concluding remarks about Williamsburg as a whole.

Banks, Jr., Marcus Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/613631

Unit Date 2024 April 14

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Marcus Banks Jr. discusses his upbringing in the sports world and those who have positively influenced his journey as a basketball player. A native of the Williamsburg and Newport News areas, Banks begins by explaining who introduced him to the game of basketball and how he fell in love with it. He discusses his experience with basketball prior to college, transferring to different high schools, and the process by which he developed his skills on and off the court, as well as how he was able to overcome adversity. He speaks on what the game has meant to him throughout his life, the various coaches who have helped mold him into the young man he is today, and teammates he has had the pleasure of playing alongside. Finally, Marcus elaborates on the countless lessons, skills, and experiences that basketball has afforded him, and how these things can be applied to other areas of his life.

McGlennon, John Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/613636

Unit Date 2024 April 2

Scope and Contents

In the following oral history, John McGlennon, a Professor in Government at the College of William & Mary and member of the Board of Supervisors of James City County, Virginia, discusses his interest in politics as a youth, his education and activities at Fordham University and Johns Hopkins University, and his participation in the Democratic Party in Williamsburg, Virginia. McGlennon explains how his New York childhood and background as a first-generation college student sparked his initial interest in politics, particularly in the Kennedy presidency. His increasing dissatisfaction with the Johnson presidency led McGlennon to become involved in the high school and college newspapers, which instilled a belief in the consequence of journalism and academia as avenues for influencing politics. McGlennon describes his impressions of the First Congressional District of Virginia upon arriving in Williamsburg in 1974, detailing his rise through the local Democratic Party from 1978 to 1981. Finally, he outlines his 1982 strategy to campaign against then-State Senator Herb Bateman in the general election for the First Congressional District of Virginia, including how he solicited PAC funds, participated in candidate-on-candidate debates, and the role of abortion in determining the final vote outcome. Williamsburg Documentary Project student Caleb Fulford conducted the interview on April 2, 2024, at 9:00 am with an Amcrest USB Microphone. Fulford and indexer Seth Novak reference the class assignment involving the interview in AMST 410: Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Professor Michelle Lelièvre.

Beavin, Sam Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/613704

Unit Date 2024 April 7

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Sam Beavin discusses the culture of music in Williamsburg and how people participate in it. He begins with his background of growing up in Parkland, Florida, and what music is common to that area. He then speaks about his involvement in a student band, Halcyon Lane, and their interactions with other bands on campus. He mentions his influences and genre tastes, and how those compare to the music he plays for Halcyon Lane. He then goes on to describe the locations he has played at, such as the Meridian, the Amphitheater, Sadler Center, Merchants' Square, and on a float during the 2023 Homecoming Parade. He elaborates on the people who listen to him play and how they identify, specifically whether there are students or otherwise. Sam concludes that he is more connected to the William and Mary music community, though enjoys those connections and is content with them. The interview was conducted by undergraduate student Seth Novak on April 7th, 2024, using Zoom H8 Digital Recorders in Earl Gregg Swem Library for the American Studies department Williamsburg Documentary Project.

unwavering dedication to work, discipline, and spirituality. Gabe recalls deriving his name from the biblical archangel Gabriel, who declared to the Virgin Mary that she had been selected to bear the Son of God and served as a touchstone throughout his upbringing. He describes attending church every Sunday with his immediate family—his mother, father, two older brothers, and grandparents—and values the faith he observed between his parents as a marital unit. Gabe also reflects on how family, early education, and recreational athletics led him to pursue and compete in collegiate basketball at the College of William & Mary. He credits his father, a former college basketball player, with inspiring him and emphasizing the academic benefits of such a sport. I completed the interview for an assignment in the Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Professor Michelle Lelièvre.

Castro, Laura Gonzalez Guest Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/613759

Unit Date 2024 March 5

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Laura Gonzalez Castro discusses her personal and professional life, their interaction, and what her work means to her. She describes her youth in Havana, Cuba, and how her experiences were similar and different from other citizens. She also discusses her immigration to the United States and the efforts that went into finding work here, bringing her family members, and how she ended up in Virginia. Gonzalez Castro then goes on to talk about her professional life in the Center for Child and Family Services, and how terminology can have a large impact on the clients she takes in, especially those considered "undocumented". Interest is also paid to her education in Cuba, as well as personal life, such as travels across Europe and domestically. The interview was conducted by undergraduate students Abby Mendez and Seth Novak on March 5th, 2024, using DGI microphones.

Montgomery, Liz Guest Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/613764

Unit Date 2024 February 22

Scope and Contents

This Williamsburg Documentary Project guest interview was conducted in the dining area in the basement of First Baptist Church in Williamsburg, Virginia. Molly Robinson conducted the interview and Michelle Lelièvre indexed. Students enrolled in the WDP also attended and interacted with Mrs. Montgomery during the interview. Prior to sitting down with us, Mrs. Montgomery gave the class a tour of the historic First Baptist Church. This enriching tour took up much of our class period, so Mrs. Montgomery scheduled a follow-up oral history that took place on April 4, 2024. In this first interview, she discusses growing up in Winter Park, Florida, attending Hungerford High School in Eatonville, FL, traveling and performing with musician Bill Doggett, raising her daughter during her career as a musician, getting married and moving to Williamsburg, starting credit unions in the town, and entering various leadership positions, including Chairperson of the History Ministry at First Baptist Church. The recording is punctuated with sounds of a phone ringing (@ 7:20 and 9:18). Mrs. Montgomery can also be heard speaking to other members of First Baptist who were in the church during the interview (@ 19:27, 36:19, and 49:10). Around 49:00, several students had to excuse themselves to attend another class.

This oral history was a follow-up to the oral history interview conducted with Mrs. Liz Montgomery by the Williamsburg Documentary Project on February 22, 2024. Both interviews were conducted by Molly Robinson, with questions developed by Molly Robinson and Michelle Lelièvre. Given the expansive nature of Mrs. Montgomery's first interview, the WDP invited her to conduct a second interview where we could explore in greater depth some of the many fascinating topics she introduced, including her experience as a jazz vocalist touring with Bill Doggett in the 1960's, her work to establish credit unions at Colonial Williamsburg and Busch Gardens, her work as a mother raising children in Williamsburg, and her leadership at the First Baptist Church. Mrs. Montgomery was very generous with her responses and shared details of her life that she had not previously disclosed publicly. She ended her interview by singing (unrehearsed!) a few bars from "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child." The Williamsburg Documentary Project was honored to welcome Mrs. Montgomery and receive the gift of her stories.

In the following oral history, Meredith Poole, a Staff Archaeologist with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, discusses how discovering a fossil in her backyard at an early age sparked her passion for archaeology. She also cites numerous educators, from her elementary school teacher to a professor with whom Poole traveled to Belize for a semester abroad, as inspiratory figures in the initial development of her almost 39-year career. Poole explains how working on the 1985 excavation of the Shields Tavern site while completing her Master's Thesis for her MA in Anthropology from William & Mary helped to both ground her roots in the Williamsburg community and provide her with invaluable on-the-ground skills, such as appreciating the value of minute details and archeological storytelling, that would become central in her later work. She discusses her contributions to the 2022 excavation of the First Baptist Church Cite as among her proudest projects, describing the uncovering of such a personal history for the descendant community as a fulfilling process that exemplifies the value of archaeology. Poole also explains how she balanced her dual interests in fieldwork and obligations as a public-facing archaeologist with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, recalling as paramount her skills in creative writing and community development. She advises future archaeologists to focus on a specialized field of research that interests them and communicate the relevant knowledge in ways that the general public can understand and appreciate. Williamsburg Documentary Project students Caleb Fulford and Abigail Swanberg conducted the interview on February 20, 2024, at 2:00 pm with a Zoom H4N and DGI microphones provided by graduate student Molly Robinson. Fulford, Swanberg, and indexer Natalie Lopez reference the class assignment involving the interview in AMST 410: Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Professor Michelle Lelièvre.

Unit Date 2025 March 6

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Diane Langhorst discusses her experience of belonging and community as a student at the College of William and Mary in the class of 1968, detailing her life in chapters. She discusses the impact of being the middle child and the oldest daughter growing up in the church and transitioning to becoming a student. Further, she recalls the cultural changes of living in Williamsburg, as her parents didn't visit and there were no black students on campus, stating that the campus was isolated and segregated. She recounts how her religion fostered community, enabling a closer connection between her and her friends. She discusses how William and Mary felt insulated, how she felt little connection to the community outside of campus, and comments on the lack of news and political discussion. Diane cites the liberal arts education at the college as the inspiration for her study of sociology and subsequent career in social work. This interview was conducted by undergraduate students Caroline Cromwell and Leah Schrum and was indexed by Sarah Kinlaw. The interview took place in the Samuel E. Jones building on the William and Mary campus on the afternoon of 3/6/2025. This interview was conducted for research purposes by the Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Molly Robinson and Tijuana Reeve.

This description is taken from the headnote for the oral history.

Meredith, Zach Oral History

Unit ID /repositories/2/archival_objects/647807

Unit Date 2025 March 4

Scope and Contents

In this interview, Zach Meredith discusses how his experience as a student at William and Mary shaped his understanding of community and belonging. He discusses how he was drawn to W&M for its intellectual community, and subsequently found his community through the American Studies department and the Williamsburg Documentary Project course. Further, Zach details how the WDP exposed him to new ways of approaching history through archive work and understanding of his positionality. He recounts how his research on the Triangle Block during the WDP developed into his senior thesis project, "Urban Renewal in the Colonial Capital: Contextualizing the Williamsburg Redevelopment & Housing Authority"(2019). Now teaching at the same high school in Durham, North Carolina that he attended as a student, Zach hopes to develop a Durham History elective, incorporating aspects from the WDP. This interview was conducted by undergraduate students Sarah Kinlaw and Leah Schrum and was indexed by Caroline Cromwell. The interview took place in the Samuel E. Jones building on the William and Mary campus and on Zoom on the afternoon of 3/4/2025. This interview was conducted for research purposes by the Williamsburg Documentary Project, taught by Molly Robinson and Tijuana Reeve.
